Receive Money Swift Code Swift/B codes are used to identify specific banks and branches about money transfers for business in international money transfers, make sure your money is in the right place. This code is used by banks to process international wire transfers and messages. All Swift codes contain 8 or 11 characters. An 11-number code refers to a specific branch, while the 8-number code (or a finished 'XXX') means the bank's head office. Swift code registration is handled by society for interbank financial telecommunications (SWIFT). Term SWIFT is often used inter-language with b, which stands for the bank's identity code. The Swift Code device is provided for informational purposes only. When all possible efforts have been made to provide accurate data, users must acknowledge that this website does not accept any responsibility for its accuracy. Only your bank can verify the information of the correct bank account. If you are paying an important or time-important payment, we recommend you contact your bank first. Perhaps you need to find a Swift Code (or B Code) has come across because you were asked for it by web banking while trying to wire money to a different bank than you. This is because almost all banks in the world are members of the SWIFT network who are responsible for money transfers and messages between financial (and even non-financial) entities, and the system needs to use these codes. A Swift code is a unique identifier for every institution branch in the world. This code is absolutely important to safely transfer money from an organization and our site is a special search engine for these codes and entities that take them. These codes are immediately known because of the organization that first introduced them (the rapid society for interbank financial telecommunications) but were later standard as b (business identity code). A SWIFT code can be established with 8 or 11 characters. Generally, maximum time, you will only need eight character SWIFT codes, which consists of 3 parts: the identity of the institution (4 characters), the country identifier (2 characters), and the location identifier (2 characters). However, in some cases, if your bank pays through a specific branch, you will need eleven-number code, including branch identification. One example code will be BARCGB22XXX which is a unique identifier for the central offices of Barclays Bank PLC based in London, UK. When you browse The SWIFT Code database on this website, not only will you be able to find the organization's b code in question, but you will also be able to find a large number of other information about it. This includes the location of the institute and the physical address of each branch. Also, you will be able to find both the country and actually the city. We believe that www.bank-codes.com is an important tool when you are receiving money or sending money, or just want to find a little more about how swift codes work. Finding through our website is unbelievably easy. You have a large number of different options. First, you can type the name of the organization, b code, or any other information in the search box on this page. Alternatively, you can browse our SWIFT code database by country, which makes it very easy to find all entities that are members of the SWIFT network in a particular country. Country.
